Actor and science advocate, Alan Alda will speak about his passionate quest to help scientists communicate more effectively with the public. In an engaging talk at 9:00 am on Nov. 29th, in Caspary auditorium, Alda will speak about his experiences working with scientists, his interest in helping them communicate about their work, and his own theory about the getting the public beyond a “blind date with science.”

Alda is a founding member of the Center for Communicating Science at Stony Brook University where he pioneered an innovative course using improvisational theatre techniques to help scientists connect with their audience.

For questions about Alan Alda’s keynote, contact The Rockefeller University Dean’s Office at 212-327-8086. Tickets are not required.